

Grape Cluster

June 10, 2003

We paint a room together, laughing and enjoying each other all day

We are involved in community projects together

We talk about politics

He likes my friends

He brags about me to his friends

He calls just because

He kisses me passionately in front of the kids

He chooses to spend time with us instead of his usual activity

He gives 16 hugs a day

He talks to Jack and Jill at dinner

He tells me I'm pretty

He thanks me for being in his life

He kisses me for 14 minutes

He walks behind me and wraps his arms around me

He suggests we all go on a hike to someplace

He has dinner all cooked when I get home

He puts his arm around me during the sermon

He shows up unexpectedly for lunch at my office

He pays cash for dinner

He surprises me with tickets and has already made arrangements for the kids

He sits down to talk to me as soon as he gets home

He encourages me to do something I'm fearful of

He pulls me aside in a public place to kiss me on the lips

We disagree and laugh at the same time

We walk along a beach at sunset, hand in hand, talking about our future

He stops the car, comes around to my side to open the door, kisses me and we walk hand in hand

He opens a door for me to walk through and I look back to catch his eye and we smile with anticipation
